

New App “Emoji Quiz” Introduces Emojis In Trivia Games

Emojis have become a part of our daily communication to express emotions and thoughts. Why? Because everyone looks funnier as an emoji. That is part of the fun in Apprope’s new game, Emoji Quiz. Players are presented with cartoonized people from the past: fictional characters, historical figures, cultural icons, and celebrities. With a selective word bank, they must spell who they think it is. Emoji Quiz is free to try and can be downloaded onto iOS or Android devices on October 4, 2013.

We use emojis daily – in texts, emails, status posts, twitter updates, and beyond – so naturally gamers and quiz-lovers are gravitating toward a quiz designed specifically around emojis. This October, game developer Apprope releases a new game that recreates some of the world’s most beloved and despised historical and cultural icons – but this time, they’re being resurrected as emojis.

Imagine Marilyn Monroe or Muammar Gaddafi as emojis. With Apprope’s new app, Emoji Quiz, there is plenty left to the imagination as you guess who each emoji character is. With this app, players see various emojis of fictional characters, historical figures, cultural icons, and celebrities and have to guess who they are.

This friendly, fun app is oftentimes amusing, as each character has been personally drawn to represent people throughout the centuries in a cartoonish, “emoji” way. Its unique content keeps the game interesting, as players will see emojis they have never seen before.

People who have a knack for subtle facial characteristics will be especially skilled at this game. Even if players get stuck, they can receive hints, such as movie lines, lyrics, or specific quotes from that person in history.

From Gandhi to Jay-Z, Apprope has designed a game that encompasses a broad range of world culture that almost any user (who doesn’t live under a rock) can both enjoy and find challenging.

Further, to make the game more challenging and social, players can invite their Facebook friends and keep track of each other’s progress. Who will be the first to solve all emojis in the game?

Emoji Quiz is released October 4 and will be available for free for iPhone, iPod, iPad and Android
