

Apprope Releases new quiz app: Riddle Quest

Apprope has created a new app called RIDDLE QUEST for gamers who love mind-benders and brainteasers. Riddle Quest takes players on an adventure through various colorful “landscapes,” from graveyards to undersea environments. In order to advance forward, players must correctly answer a series of riddles. With dozens of landscapes and over 1000 riddles, this game brings a new experience to smartphones. Released April 3, Riddle Quest can be downloaded for free from the App Store or Google Play.

Apprope’s 2013 release of Quiz Quest met with wild success. In response, the company is now releasing RIDDLE QUEST: a similar journey where players proceed through magical, colorful landscapes. However, this time they must solve a long series of riddles.

This game is simple to use, though its hundreds of riddles are tricky. For each step in the journey, players are presented with a riddle, and they must type the correct answer in order to advance along the path. The object of the game is to make it to the end of the long road, crossing every possible landscape. If players get stuck, they can purchase hints to help them in their journey.

This app isn’t only a personal mind challenge – it also allows players to connect with their friends. The connection feature allows people to compete or track each other’s progress through the app.

The graphics of Riddle Quest are colorful, dynamic, and beyond creative. In one leg of their journey, players might find themselves among parachutes, sea creatures, planets and stars, and more. The variety in scenery keeps things fresh. Every advancement on this virtual “board” brings something new and visually exciting.

Available this April 3rd, Riddle Quest can be downloaded and tried for free. It’s compatible with iOS and Android devices. The game has been translated into six different languages: English, French, German, Norwegian, Swedish and Danish. With more than thousand different riddles, Riddle Quest offers a wide range of challenges that will keep players occupied for hours.
